

Pregnancy and Parenting

Richmond's Guide to Helping Services

Dr. James Lu, Medical Health Officer, Richmond

Becoming a parent is one of life's most exciting and challenging experiences. There will be many emotional, physical and family changes. But knowing what to expect can make these changes enjoyable and easier to handle. Visit your pregnancy care provider regularly and use the health information and support to keep you and your baby healthy.

This directory brings together the many resources in Richmond. Together with your own support system of family, friends, and health care professionals, it can provide you with information and guidance. Though many of the programs listed here involve a fee, confidential financial help is available.

If you have any suggestions for additions or improvements to this directory, please call:

Pregnancy Tests

If you believe you are pregnant, it is important to have a pregnancy test as soon as possible. The earlier you know, the earlier you can think about your options. It is recommended that you should see a doctor or midwife before 10 – 12 weeks of pregnancy to ensure time sensitive tests are completed. As well, you can take better care of yourself by eating well, keeping active and avoiding alcohol, cigarettes, and drugs. Pregnancy self-test kits are available from the drugstore and are reliable if used correctly. However, we recommend confidential pregnancy tests which are available from your doctor or at the following centres:

Pregnancy Support

The Nurse-Family

Partnership Program (NFP) 1-855-550-2229

NFP also called the BC Healthy Connections Research Project is one component of Healthy Start, an initiative of the Healthy Families BC prevention strategy.

NFP is an intensive nurse home visitation program. It works to improve the health, wellbeing and self sufficiency of young (less than 25 years old), low-income, pregnant women who will be first-time mothers, and their children.

The program includes regular home visits by public health nurses from the prenatal period through until the child’s second birthday.

Enrolment in the NFP program is voluntary, and needs to occur early in pregnancy. Participating women must receive their first visit before week 28th of pregnancy.

The program goals are to: improve pregnancy, improve child health and development by helping parents provide sensitive and competent care giving, and improve parental life-course by helping parents develop a vision for their future, plan subsequent pregnancies, and continue their education and employment.

Call for more information on participating.

Smoking, Alcohol & Drugs

Mothers and their partners need to make healthy choices before, during and after pregnancy. Using alcohol, tobacco and illegal drugs puts mothers and babies at risk. Do not drink alcohol. Do not smoke and avoid second hand smoke. Do not use illegal drugs or share needles. Drugs and medications of any kind (over-the counter remedies, prescription drugs, herbal teas/remedies, and vitamins) should be taken only with your doctor’s or midwife’s knowledge or advice. Pregnancy is the perfect time to make healthier choices. If you need help quitting or just need more information, talk with your doctor, midwife, and public health nurse or connect with one of these agencies:

Family Violence & Crisis

Physical or verbal abuse from a husband or partner is a problem that some women face during pregnancy. This is sometimes caused by increased strain on the relationship or feelings of jealousy and resentment towards the baby during and after pregnancy. If you feel threatened, get help. Remember, physical violence is against the law. You and your baby are at risk. If you have been physically hurt, it is important to get medical help from a doctor or Hospital Emergency as soon as possible. For further help contact:

The Richmond Early Years Bridging Project is for new and current refugee families living in Richmond with children 0–6 years of age. The service will support families through:

- Providing a safe and supportive environment to play and learn with your children
- Access to resources such as housing, health, food and education
- Introducing families to Canadian culture
- Address health, safety and nutritional needs
- Providing opportunities to meet other families, parenting support and resources

The Birth Centre at Richmond Hospital is the most convenient location for Richmond residents to give birth. If you choose a doctor/midwife who practices in another area in the lower mainland (eg. Vancouver) or if you are referred to an obstetrician in another area (eg. at BC Women’s Hospital), then you may be giving birth at the hospital where your doctor/midwife does most of his/her deliveries.

Pre-registration

This should be done at the hospital where you will give birth by the 20th week of your pregnancy or earlier. Preregistration forms can be obtained from the information desk at The Richmond Hospital or from your doctor’s or midwife’s office (included in the Pregnancy Information Package).

Going Home

Most women will be discharged home within one or two days following birth if mother and newborn are not experiencing any problems. Mothers and newborns do very well with this shortened discharge time (if they have good care and support from family members and if they are closely followed by health care professionals). In Richmond, this close follow-up is provided by the family doctor/midwife and the public health nurses from the Healthy Babies & Family Program.

Richmond Public Health

Healthy Babies & Families Program 604-233-3150

All Richmond residents are visited in the Richmond Hospital by a public health liaison nurse prior to discharge from the hospital and then contacted again by a public health nurse within 24–48 hours of discharge. Follow-up care for you and your baby will be arranged. Public health nurses are available to offer support for you and your baby starting in the prenatal period and continuing until your child is 2 years old.

Baby Days Parent Group 604-233-3150

Bring your baby and share the joys, frustrations, and concerns of being a new parent with other parents, public health nurses, and other resource people. Topics are of interest to parents of babies under 8 months of age.

Available in Mandarin and Cantonese

Child Health Clinics 604-233-3100

Child health clinics are held by the public health nurses at several locations in Richmond. Clinics are available Monday through Thursday and in the evening. The public health nurse will immunize your child, as well as offer counselling about your child's growth and development, nutrition, parenting, safety and community resources.

Breastfeeding Clinic 604-233-3150

Public health nurses offer individual help with baby's position and latch at the breast, assessment of mother's milk supply, baby's growth, and prevention and treatment of common breastfeeding concerns.

Audiology (Hearing) 604-233-3188

Hearing tests for babies and children from birth to 5 years.

A non-profit society that brings together people and services by providing them with community information and promoting volunteerism. As the community information centre in Richmond, the organization acts as a bridge between the community and the resources available, publishing and making available various directories with the support of community partners, such as the Richmond Community Services Directory, Seniors Directory and Low Income Resource Directory. They provide community brochures, pamphlets, guides, maps as well as government forms at their office and at Richmond Shopping Center. Information on other programs like the Richmond Christmas Fund, Volunteer Centre, and Leadership Now, are available on their website:
